TWO CAR PRIZES CREATE INTEREST IN BIG CAMPAIGN

The Times-Gazette's great campaign is just getting under way. This week has seen considerable activity by the candidates themselves and by next week the workers will have made splendid gains in votes. But don't think it is too late now to begin. The contest has over four weeks to run and anybody joining the race this week has just as good a chance of winning the $1185 standard Nash Sedan as the other show. See this prize at Fowler's Nash Showrooms on the highway, north of town.

But the beauty of this campaign lies in the fact that there are two more cars to be given away. The second grand prize is a $920.00 Whippet Six Coach. This car is sold by Davies Auto Repair Shop on the highway near Five Points.

Success will depend on how much time entrants are willing to devote to the enterprise. Spare time afternoons and evenings may be turned into money as the 'Times-Gazette' will pay all who do not win one of the prizes a commission of ten per cent if they remain active until the close of the campaign.

There are a great number of people in this district, many of them newcomers who have not been approached for a subscription to their local newspaper. There are also hundreds of regular subscribers who will renew their subscriptions for another year for the asking. All count for votes.

This week Miss Alma Collins, one of the popular employees of the P. G. & E. is leading the campaign, Mrs. Stebenne is second and Mrs. Charles Kinkeid is third. Mrs. Geo. Steinberg of La Honda is a close fourth. Mrs. Holmes is still near the top of the list. Mrs. T. C. McGovern has many friends who are helping her. Miss Sarah Ward has gained many votes since last week to the new fifth. Mrs. Baker, Miss Foster, Miss Cashman, Mrs. Winters, Miss Cullen, Mrs. Scanlon, Mrs. Adams and Miss Leila Swett. Happy Hogan and Jimmie DeBenedetti have made large gains in votes. In Menlo Park Miss Smith is still leading. A new entrant, Miss Ponzini has taken second place; Miss Weston has come up to third. Adam Patterson has gained many votes.

In Atherton Mrs. Knapp is making a splendid race.

Miss Mamie Mangini of Portola has many votes to her credit. A new entrant at Woodside, Miss Alberta Shine, has made a splendid opening and her friends are predicting success for her.

Miss Mable Marsh of Half Moon Bay is a new candidate who is near the top. She is the daughter of Mrs. Marsh of the Palace Market.

Miss Diana Hogavoll of Los Lomitas is the representative of that district, and her friends are helping her to make a success of her campaign.

The votes of Mrs. Lyle Clark of San Carlos continue to mount.

The friends of Mrs. A. J. Davis, formerly of Half Moon Bay, now of Redwood City, have given her a splendid start in the race.

Other new candidates having a fine beginning are Mrs. Ogilvie, Mrs. Wise, Professor Brown, Mrs. Crowe and Frank Morton.

Prize Ballots

The candidate in Redwood City and the one outside of Redwood City who turn in the largest amount of subscription money by October 11th will each receive 150,000 extra votes. The two who are second will receive 100,000 extra votes, the ones who are third will get 75,000 extra votes, the ones who are fourth 50,000 extra votes, and the ones who are fifth 25,000 extra votes. These are in addition to the regular weekly offer of 100,000 extra votes for $25.00 in subscriptions or 250,000 extra votes for $50.00 in subscriptions.

No better offer will be made during the campaign, so take advantage of this offer. This will include everything since the beginning of the campaign.

SAN MATEO ATHLETE SHOT IN ARGUMENT

Former Football Star Fails to Press Charges

Henry Henrioulle, former football star of the San Mateo high school, is in the Mills Memorial Hospital in San Mateo with a shattered leg as the result of an altercation with the husband of a woman at whose apartment he was calling. Edwin J. Cooksey, young San Mateo contractor, who fired the shot which injured Henrioulle, was released from jail here when the former athlete failed to press charges against him.

The shooting took place at the Red Ball, a resort adjoining the apartment where Henrioulle called upon Mrs. Cooksey. When Henrioulle called the door was opened by Cooksey, and an argument began. This was continued in the adjoining resort and ended in the firing of the shot by Cooksey.

Cooksey was booked at the jail here by Sheriff McGrath and was released on Tuesday. The shot is said to have traveled through Henrioulle's leg and emerged through the sole of his foot. It will probably result in his being a cripple for life.

Woodside Promised Telephone Exchange

A telephone exchange and the installation of dial system telephones were promised to residents of the Woodside district last Friday by the Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co. at a hearing before the State Railroad Commission held at the courthouse here.

Several residents of Woodside appeared at the hearing. The plans of the telephone company were explained by L. C. Brown, district manager of the company and by James Marshall of San Francisco, member of the company's legal staff. No protests were registered, and the matter was taken under consideration by the commission. The commission was represented at the hearing by Commissioner Williams.

District Manager Brown stated this week that as soon as the ruling of the commission is received that his company is prepared to go ahead with the improvements in the Woodside district.

Holdup Attempted on Middlefield Road

A bold holdup was attempted late last Thursday evening upon a local girl on the Middlefield road near the Base Hospital. Miss Inez Jamieson of this city was driving toward the hospital where the local Relief Corps was holding one of its monthly card parties. As she was nearing the hospital another machine drove alongside of her and ordered her to stop.

Miss Jamieson says that the other machine tried to crowd her off to the side of the road when she did not stop. When she saw the intention of the other driver Miss Jamieson says that she speeded up and saw the other car turn when she neared Palo Alto. In the other car the local girl saw two men. She did not, however, obtain a very good view of either as the evening was dark.

Sheriff McGrath and Deputy Tom Maloney conducted a search for the two men but did not see anyone whom they coul dconnect with the attempted holdup.

Beresford Man Held in Wright Act Case

After a hearing in the court of Justice of the Peace Edward I. McAuliffe Tuesday, Fred Rosenstein of Beresford was held to answer in the superior court on a charge of violating the Wright act. Rosenstein was arrested following a raid on his Beresford establishment by Sheriff McGrath. His bail was fixed at $1000 cash or $2000 bonds. He was released on bail Tuesday night.

Funeral Services Held For Mrs. Mary Burton

Funeral services were held Monday at Mt. Carmel Catholic church for Mrs. Mary Burton, wife of Frank Burton of this city. Mrs. Burton died at the family home at 120 Pine street on Saturday following a brief illness. She was 53 years old and a native of California. The family had been residents of this city for many years. Interment was in Holy Cross cemetery at Menlo Park.

Menlo Robbery Linked With Othe rCases in Various Other Cities

The robbery of the Peninsula Building Material Co. safe in Menlo Park last Thursday night has been linked by the state department of criminal identification with similar cases reported from Colma, Palo Alto, Yountville, Los Angeles and Oakland. The characteristics of the job are so similar to the other cases that it is believed that the same robbers were responsible for all.

The robbers gained entrance to the office of the Menlo Park plant Thursday night by prying open a window with a broken auto spring. The safe was dynamited. After blowing the door off the safe, $66.71 was removed and the robbers made their escape by means of a car which they had parked nearby.

In the Colma case which was reported on September 5, entrance was gained to the plant of the Colma Marble Works by digging under a door to the entrance used by trucks in entering the plant. The latest report was from Yountsville, Napa county, where a safe was robbed Wednesday night of this week.

REDWOOD Y. M. I. TO PLAY FAST TEAM

The Hottentotts, rated to be one of the fastest football teams of San Francisco, will be the adversaries of the local Y. M. I. team on the high school turf Sunday at 2:30. The game is exected to be one of the most exciting of the season as the local team is in fine shape and expects to make the visitors win every point they make.

Last Sunday's game was between the Y. M. I. team and the Bay View Athletic Club. It resulted in a victory for the former team with a score of 32 to 12.

The local club is arranging a complete schedule for the season which will be announced next week.

Local Y. M. I. To Hold Dance Tonight

Members of the Redwood City Young Men's Institute are planning a dance and entertainment to be given tonight at the Mt. Carmel Men's Council hall on the corner of Brewster and Warren streets. Dancing will be from 9 to 12. The admission will be 25 cents for ladies and 50 cents for gentlemen. The affair is planned to raise money for the Y. M. I. booth at the annual Catholic fair.

South City Man Gets Ninety Days

Martin Padilla, 30, a Mexican laborer of South San Francisco, who was charged last week with a statutory offense against a girl of that city, entered a plea of guilty to the charge on Monday and was sentenced to a term of 90 days in the county jail. He appeared before Justice of the Peace Edward Farrell of South San Francisco.

HEARING POSTPONED ON MURDER CHARGE

The hearing of the testimony in the case of Jose Romera who is held on a murder charge in connection with the dealth last week of Frank C. Loper was conducted this week before Justice of the Percy W. Jackson, acting for Justice of the Peace McAuliffe.

Loper was shot last June, and Romera was arrested when Loper died last week at the Base hospita at Menlo Park. Testimony was heard on Tuesday and again yesterday afternoon. The hearing was continued at that time to October 4th.

To Hold Funeral For Albert Bowden

Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at the parlors of Layng & Tinney on Washington street for Albert Bowden, who died Tuesday following a long illness. Bowden was 62 years old, a native of Michigan. He had lived here for several years on Santa Clara avenue near the Woodside road, having come here from San Francisco. He is survived by a brother living in Richwood, Michigan.

Pony Killed When Struck by Bus Here

A valuable pony belonging to Mrs. Charles Merrill of Atherton was killed here last Friday night when struck by a bus on Main street. The pony was being cared for here, but took an opportunity to leave its paddock Friday night and wandered onto the street. It was killed at the corner of Main street and Shasta avenue.

District Attorney Is Kiwanis Speaker

The Human Element in the Administration of Justice" was the topic upon which District Attorney Franklin Swart addresed the Redwood City Kiwanis club Wednesday noon at its regular weekly meeting. District Attorney Swart in a forceful and interesting manner showed how the human element can creep into the procedure of the courts and result in various anomalies.

Prior to the address by Swart, Charles G. Lambert, who will represent the Redwood City club at the state contest to be held at Sacramento soon, gave a short talk which he is preparing for that occasion.

The chairman of the meeting was Leo T. Ross, and as this meeting marked the fourth year of the club the chairman called on each of the three living past presidents for a few remarks. They were Elmore B. Hinman, James D. Hedge and Chas. G. Lambert.

May Not Be New But It's Popular

There's nothing new under the sun!

F. S. McGinnis, passenger traffic manager for Southern Pacific, is inclined to admit the truth of this ancient proverb.

On September 1 Southern Pacific placed in serivce between San Francisco and Del Monte what was believed to be an innovation in transportation. On that date specially constructed automobile baggage cars became part of the equipment of the fast passenger train Del Monte and motorists were able to check their automobiles as baggage.

Yesterday McGinnis was handed a picture of a train operated in the East in the year 1832. The picture showed a carriage of the Victoria type perched on top of a flat car, its four occupants surveying the passing scenery from beneath the shade of parasols. In the car ahead two horses in harness were likewise taking in the sights from a railroad car that looked something like a roadside refreshment booth on wheels.

"So," McGinnis said, "in place of being original, our automobile baggage car is only a modern and greatly improved version of a plan first tried in 1832. However, it does save time and energy for the motorist who wants his car for service at Del Monte, but does not care for the long and tiring drive over congested highways, just to get to his destination."

Local Woman Granted Divorce Here Monday

An interlocutory decree of divorce was granted here Monday by Judge Geo. H. Buck to Mrs. Verna Parham from Frank Parham. The mother was granted the custody of a young child. The Parhams are residents of Redwood City. The plaintiff was represented by Kincaid & Fitzpatrick.

Mr. and Mrs. George McNulty, with County Recorder and Mrs. T. C. Rice, returned Monday from a vacation spent in the northwest and in Canada.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Morris of Finger avenue are receiving the congratulations of their friends upon the birth last Saturday of a baby girl at the Palo Alto hospital.

Mrs. Harry Potts is chairman of a committee which is making arrangements for a card party to be given by the local lodge of the Fraternal Aid Union. The party will be in the Foresters' hall on Tuesday evening, October 9th.

Mrs. Clement Wise, local agent of the Bankers Life Insurance Co. will be in attendance tomorrow on the agency meeting of that company at the State building in San Francisco. Agents will be present from all parts of northern California and Nevada. Similar meetings are held on the same day by all agencies of the company.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. A. Genochfo of 237 Washington street, together with their little son Billy, will take their departure today for Willows, in Glenn county, where George has secured an excellent position as keeper on a large wild duck and goose shooting preserve three miles from that city. They are leaving behind them a host of friends and acquaintances in this city who wish them the best of luck and prosperity in their new home. Truthfully it may be said that what is Redwood's loss will be Willow's gain, for both are so well and favorably known here that the well wishes that follow them are heartfelt and sincere.

Local Man To Give Radio Talk

Roy A. Hohberger, the local Y. M. C. A. Secretary, has accepted an invitation to talk over KFRC on October 6th at 8 p. m. on the subject of "Stamp Collecting (Philately), a Hobby for Young and Old".

"Is the study and collecting of stamps mere child's play?" "Are adults who collect stamps a little peculiar?" "What values can be gained from the collecting and study of these bits of paper?" These are a few of the questions that will be answered. The main emphasis, however, will be to present facts about this hobby as a boon for recreational and educational activity to busy men and women.

In addition to the promotion of four clubs in the interest of this hobby in the county, Hohberger is preparing a manual which will not only set forth the values to be gained from this hobby but also will give in some detail the method for organization and program material for clubs along this line.

Mark McCann Enlarges Redwood City Branch

Mark A. McCann, San Francisco and peninsula realtor, announces the appointment of W. L. Meussdorffer to general manager of his Redwood City branch office, to take effect October 1st. He also states that he is to increase his selling force in charge of that office.

In addition to the general real estate business of selling, leasing and renting, this branch is at once going to spread out into the field of selling industrial land in the Redwood City district and also install a separate department for the handling of insurance, representing as agent many of the largest insurance companies.

McCann, in making this announcement, stated his reason for this big expansion in Redwood City is that he believes that this city and the districts surrounding same are on the verge of one of the biggest substantial developments ever experienced on the San Francisco peninsula.

He also pointed out the fact that those level-headed men managing some of the largest corporations in the country who are always looking ahead for a live center have demonstrated what they think of Redwood City by installing their branch plants there.

Redwood City is the county seat of San Mateo County with one of the best deep water harbors on the San Francisco Bay where over $100,000 has just been appropriated to improve this harbor. The very best of railroad transportation with a new railroad company about to enter its center and make its terminal there, excellent bus line service, wonderful boulevards, new Bayshore highway now being built through the East side of the town where thousands of acres are available to industrial sites, some of which are now being bought and improved with manufacturing plants which furnishes payrolls, the backbone to all large cities.

Living conditions in Redwood City and vicinity cannot be surpassed. The climate is as near perfect as anyone can ask for. The very best of schools, both public and private, from the primary grades to the high schools and colleges. Comfortable homes on large lots or acreage to suit are available to the working man at a very low figure on very easy terms, with some of the finest, more expensive 1 to 5 acre homesites on the first foothills west of Redwood City or to the south in the Woodside or Atherton districts where some of the most beautiful homes in the county are located.

Supervisor Election Contest Dismissed

The election contest filed by Frederick Peterson against Thomas L. Hickey, supervisor of the first township was dismissed by Judge Geo. H. Buck Tuesday at the request of the attorneys representing ePterson. Peterson was the contending candidate in the recent election for the position of supervisor of the first township. In the returns, Hickey, the incumbent, was declared to have defeated Peterson by 262 votes.

A number of Redwood City people attended the aviation dance given Monday evening at the Whitcomb hotel in San Francisco by the Pacific Aero Club. Among those present were E. B. Hinman, Dr. Robert Frazier, W. I. Clark, Mrs. Amy Holmes, Mrs. A. Martin, Miss Audine Martin, Mrs. A. Bertoluchi, Miss Dora Bertoluchi, Miss Palma Demma.

FLAMES SWEEP BUTANO, OTHER SECTIONS PERILED

Y. M. C. A. WILL CANVASS FOR ANNUAL FUNDS

John Gill, chairman of the San Mateo County Y. M. C. A., made public today the plan of the committee to launch the annual current expense campaign in Redwood City on October 4th.

Acting under the leadership of Donald W. Williams the local "Y" committee is organized to carry through an intensive campaign for ten days.

The county committee met Tuesday night to determine the minimum cost to operate the extensive work of the association successfully. The goals for Redwood City and other Sequoia District communities will be determined at the meeting of the workers today. Other San Mateo County cities will hold similar campaigns during October. Redwood City will be the first of nine communities to launch its annual campaign.

The members of the Executive Committee present at the meeting last night were John Gill, Donald W. Williams, Frederick J. Smith, B. L. Grow, John D. Bromfield, William H. Eddy, Roy A. Hohberger and Robert W. Simcock.

FAMOUS STORY ON SEQUOIA THEATRE SCREEN

The widely heralded $2,000,000 Universal super-production of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" has at last been scheduled to show here and will open at the Sequoia Theatre next Wednesday and Thursday. The gigantic feature was close to two years in production and over 5,000 people were used in making it. Every financial, techniacl, and physical resource of the tremendous Universal organization was employed in making this one of the greatest photodramas ever brought to the screen. Harry Pollard directed the super-motion picture and an all-star cast was selected to play the featured roles. The cast includes Margarita Fischer, Arthur Edmund Carew, John Roche, Gertrude Astor, Lucian Littlefield, George Siegmann, Mona Ray, Virginia Grey, Eulalie Jensen, J. Gordon Russell, Aileen Manning, Jack Mower, Vivien Oakland and others.

P. G. & E. Clerk Injured in Wreck

Mrs. W. A. Bubb, a clerk in the local office of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company, was seriously injured in an automobile accident which occurred at San Carlos Sunday night. The accident occured, it is said, when the car in which Mrs. Bubb was riding was crowded off the highway and into a ditch.

Mrs. Bubb suffered a fractured skull and other serious injuries. In the car also were her husband, driver of the car, who suffered severe cuts and bruises, and Miss Havie Mason of San Francisco, who had both legs crushed.

Islam Shrine Park Still in Danger

Fires which started last week in the Butano canyon on the coast near Pescadero have continued to rage over the brush country of that region despite the efforts of a large crew of men under the direction of Bert Werder, county fire warden. The fire has threatened dozens of summer homes in the Butano district and still menaces the magnificent redwood grove of Islam Temple Shrine in the Alpine district.

Reports yesterday indicated that the Shrine grove would be saved if a change in the wind did not occur. Werder this week conscripted two crews of men from here to fight the flames. In securing fire fighters Werder was assisted by Deputy Sheriff Neri. Werder, who was injured last week by falling over a fallen tree at the scene of the fire, has recovered and during the whole week has been actively engaged in directing the efforts of the fire fighters.

The fire, which is threatening the great Shrine grove is reported to be burning between Peters creek and Tarwater creek and is said to be burning rapidly toward the A. F. Bordi ranch in the Alpine.

The present fire is the fifth fire in this district during the present season and is said to be the most serious. A fire a short time ago in a nearby section swept through the land of the California Tie Company destroying 20,000 railroad ties and a quantity of timber. This fire followed up the canyon of the Gazos creek.

Fire lines have been established by Werder along the summit of the Alpine ridge. The fire fighters are working in a section far removed from any supply of food and with a very scanty supply of water, according to Werder, who telephoned this week to Miss Helen Chesebrough, vice-chairman of the San Mateo County Red Cross.

Miss Chesebrough, Mrs. Theodore Lilienthal and Mrs. William Van Antwerp used their cars to take food to the fire fighters. Other members of the chapter's "motor corps" have been arranging supplies of food for the men on the fire lines.

SISTER SHIP HERE TO LINDBERG'S "WE"

A duplicate of the "Spirit of St. Louis" in which Col. Chas. Lindbergh made his historic flight, is among the attractions at the aero exposition here this week. The ship was built by the same people who built Lindbergh's ship and was the seventh ship built after that one. It is operated by John Rowe, who has recently completed an aerial tour of the western states, in which he crossed the Rocky mountains at an altitude of 18,000 feet. The ship is equipped with a 200 horsepower Wright whirl wind motor similar to the one of Lindbergh's machine.

THE STREET CALLED JANUS

IN ancient Rome the money-changers all had their little offices on the street called Janus. That street was the center of Roman banking—such as it was.

Banking has developed tremendously in the centuries that have passed, until today every one has at his command the service of a strong bank.

Few are, and no one need be, without the safety and assistance afforded by a bank account.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

California has sent 77 lepers to the Federal Leprosarium at Carville, La., since the institution was opened in 1922, according to the State Department of Public Health. Nine have been sent this year.

Despite his note indicating suicide, Percy F. Barnes, slayer of four men in a shooting orgy at Sacramento August 27, died in his county jail cell last week of heart attack, it was indicated following an autopsy. Dr. C. H. McDonnell, county autopsy surgeon, found no indications of poisoning, it was announced, but discovered that Barnes had been suffering from a serious heart condition which probably resulted in his sudden death.

Emergency forest fire conditions and a reputation of the disastrous man-caused brush and timber fires that have swept the State during the past few weeks may necessitate the closing of all national forests in California to public use and travel until the fall rains set in, according to S. B. Show, chief of the California District, United States Forest Service.

Butte County, is probably the first California city to arrest a pedestrian for carrying a "tail light." Joseph Marcel, Los Angeles county "hitch-hiker," according to word received, was temporarily detained for investigation because of his unusual highway equipment. Marcel carried a flighlight to hail passing motorists at night and also had a small "tail light" strapped on his pack as a signal to automobiles on the road behind him.

The California State Supreme Court at San Francisco, a few days ago, decided to consider at its Sacramento session on November 13th the appeal from the death sentence of six prisoners who were convicted for their participation in the Folsom Prison riot of last Thanksgiving Day. The men who wish to escape hanging are Anthony Brown, ringleader; Roy Stokes, Walter F. Burke, James H. Gregg, Albert M. Stewart and Eugene Crosby.

One man was seriously injured, several cars and their cargoes were reduced to splinters and a long stretch of Northwestern Pacific tracks was strewn with wreckage when a freight train crashed into the rear of another near Chiquita a few days ago. Possibility that several other men may be buried in the train's wreckage was expressed by the one known victim, Chris Dellas of San Francisco. Dellas said he and six other men had caught a ride on the forward train.

partment failed to protect unit buyers.

State aid was extended to 14,500 orphans and half orphans in California during the past fiscal year, Mrs. Ana L. Saylor, head of the State Department of Social Welfare, reports. More than 18,000 children were cared for in orphanages, day nurseries, preventoria, rescue homes, schools for defectives, boarding homes, homes for convalescents and child-placing agencies, Mrs. Saylor said. The total of 1500 orphan children were adopted during the twelve months.

Menaced by two blue automatics in the hands of a youthful masked bandit, fifty passengers on the San Francisco-bound Southern Pacific "Lark" one night last week disorged money and valuables worth nearly $1,000. The loot was dropped into a hat passed through the crowded club car of the train by one of the bandit's victims. Filling his pockets with the collected booty, the robber opened a vestibule door and leaped from the train as it pulled into Glendale at thirty miles an hour.

Fishing interests are planning to go before the next State legislature with a plan to extend the season on bass and salmon in the lower Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers two weeks. I. N. Hylen, secretary of the Sacramehto Fishermen's Union, states that the plans for the longer season are due to the fact that river fishermen have made practically no catch this year. The season closed Saturday. The fishermen also will ask a law to prevent the spearing of salmon at up-river points during the spawning season. They claim that the spearing operations are reducing the run of salmon.

Apportionment of $16,841,233.48 of State funds to the publicc schools of California was announced a few days ago by William John Cooper, State superintendent of public instruction. This is the first of two allotments to be made during the current school term. The great bulk of the money—$15,249,252.02—goes to the elementary or grade schools. This apportionment is based upon $700 for each teacher unit, augmented by additional amounts to reimburse elementary school districts for educating physically handicapped children. The second apportionment, which will be announced in February, will be on the basis of $5.91 per unit of average daily attendance.

Completion of the study of possible means of financing California's gigantic plan of State-wide water conservation is expected by Edward Hyatt Jr., State engineer by October 1. The investigation is being made by Lester Ready, consulting engineer and formerly chief engineer of the state railroad commission with the office of the state engineer. Hyatt stated that the study will involve exhaustive investigation of five possible sources of revenue, ranging from absolute public ownership at private power distribution under State supervision.

The grand prize for the best collective exhibit in the Pacific Southwest Exposition at Long Beach, won by the State of California, was presented a few days ago to Governor C. C. Young. Comprising the award are a certificate of honor and a medal cast from pure California gold. The State's exhibit depicting the work of the various governmental departments, was similar to that in the Educational Building at the State Fair. The medal, which measures two inches in diameter, is the work of the prominent sculptor, Roger Noble Burnham.

A lot of 1,300 loaves of bread from one of the largest bakeries in Alameda county was found by the inspectors of the division of weights and measures, State Department of Agriculture, to average one ounce per loaf short weight. The entire batch was confiscated and distributed to various charitable institutions of the county. The bakery was warned that a second offense will mean prosecution.

The best deer hunting sections of California opened to the hunters last week when Districts No. 1, 1½, 1¾, 4, 4½, and 4¾ will be available to the sportsmen. These regions embrace Siskiyou, Trinity, Shasta, Modoc and Lassen counties, in which the larger deer are found. Last week grouse shooting also opened. A large number of birds are reported in the region of Hunter's Lodge on Lake Tahoe.

Motor accidents killed 1,600 persons in California last year. So said G. W. Griffin of the motor vehicle department of San Luis Obispo County before the meeting of the justices of the peace and traffic officers' association of the central coast counties at Atascadero recently. Fatal auto accidents are increasing 8 per cent yearly and present the main problem of traffic officers, Griffin declared, adding that twenty persons are injured for every one killed.

Eighty-two members of the United Spanish War Veterans from all parts of California a few days ago were en route to Havana, Cuba, on the Panama Pacific liner California, to attend the thirtieth annual national encampment of the organization there. Gabriel Angel Amenabar Cabello, Cuban consul at San Francisco, boarded the vessel prior to her departure to extend to Clarence A. Son, commander of the California department, the greetings of the Cuban government.

Building and engineering construction in California has cost 626 employes' lives in the past four years! With a view of reducing this high human cost of the State's material progress, the State Industrial Accident Commission called a safety conference. Will J. French, director of the State Department of Industrial Relations, announcing the conference, called attention to the tragic drain of building accidents on human resources.

San Quentin Prison gates opened a few days ago to liberate Cassie Turner, 24, Indian maid whose conviction of the slaying of Robert De Clute, a white man, near Alturas last February 16, was later reversed by the Third District Appellate Court. Serving one to ten years, the Indian girl was set temporarily free by a court order signed by Superior Judge F. M. Jamison of Modoc county, in whose court she was found guilty. The court's trial errors were basis for the reversal. She will be given a new trial.

Jay Bruce, State lion hunter, who lost an eye while pursuing a mountain lion through the brush a few months ago, is going back to lion hunting. He so revealed at his home in San Lorenzo, where he has been recovering from the shock of losing his right eye, when the eyeball was penetrated by a twig. Even now Bruce is preparing for a lion hunting trip into Amador county. He declared he isn't making the trip in an offical capacity, but principally to see if he still is as good at tracking and shooting as he was before the accident.

Attorney General U. S. Webb will not be appointed Lieutenant Governor, nor is District Attorney Asa Keyes of Los Angeles in line for selection as attorney general, despite reports to the contrary from Southern California. That was the gist of predictions being made in political circles at Sacramento a few days ago when the the Webb-Keyes appointment gossip reached State officials from Los Angeles. Governor Young as yet has given no indication of his probable selection of a successor to Lieut. Gov. Buron R. Fitts.

California will have revenues totaling approximately $55,000,000 for use on State highway work during the next two years. That was the estimate of income as preparations went forward recently for the road construction and maintenance budget covering the coming biennium. An extensive program of widening on the San Francisco-Los Angeles valley highway was being mentioned as one of the outstanding projects to be carried forward. Portions of this route between Bakersfield and Merced, it was said, will be widened from the present 15-foot pavement to a 20-foot pavement with a 36-foot grade.

All construction work has been completed on the coast route south to Los Angeles, reports the Touring Bureau of the California State Automobile Association, and this road is in perfect condition. The Golden State Highway (Valley line) is also in first class condition from Oakland south through Dublin Canyon to Tracy, Fresno, Bakersfield and thence via the Ridge Route to Los Angeles. There are one or two pieces of construction work on this road that necessitate short detours; however no delay is encountered.

Settling up the bills for the special legislative session held a few weeks ago, State Comptroller Ray L. Riley reported the total cost, including printing, will not run more than $5,500 for the two-day emergency tax session. The Senate's contingent expense was $145.75; mileage, $1,162.70, and attaches, $200, making a total of $1,-50845. The cost of the Assembly reached $148.25 for contingent expense; $1,724.50 for mileage, $200 for attaches, totaling $2,072.75. The printing bill, according to Riley, will run under $2,000.

POULTRY

HEN COMFORT IS MOST PROFITABLE

When the rough days of autumn and winter arrive, the hens begin to hunt about for comfort and protection from winter winds and snow. If the poultry house is cold, dark, and uninviting, it is very unprofitable to the owner. It not only shortens up the egg supply, but next spring the hens go to work with a handicap because they have been poorly wintered.

If we give the hens one-half the attention that we do our other stock they start making things count, says a writer in an exchange. Our poultry house is built for economy and comfort for the hens. We are strong believers in the scratching department, making the hen work a lot. To do this we have all the floor space in the building arranged for bad days, for that is when they must work inside. We put up a gunny-sack curtain in front of the perches, which serves for two purposes. It keeps the hens warm when on the perches at night, and keeps them off the perches in the daytime.

Then we partition off the inside with this cheap burlap which breaks possible drafts, and also divides the flock in their work for the day. We also open the windows, and drop down a burlap curtain on bad days to keep out cold air, storms and beating winds. This burlap is almost indispensable in our poultry equipment, and we use much of it. Our front curtain to the main building is made from it, tacked upon frames so it can be raised or lowered as needed.

On snowy, rough days the hens work happily away, more contented than if outside. It has always been our custom to set up a windbreak of cornstalks against the lee sides of the fences and the west and north of the houses, and it is wonderful how the hens will take refuge behind this fodder barrage many winter days when the snow is off.

Consistent Layer Will Molt Late in Season

Most hens stop laying when they begin to molt. It is a fact no longer disputed that a hen, in order to make a high yearly record, must be a consistent la er. The early molting hen is not a consistent layer. She takes all the fall months as a vacation for changing her plumage. The consis'ent layer molts late and grows her new plumage rapidly.

The hen that under normal conditions molts early, will not lay as many winter eggs as the hen that molts late. Neither will she begin egg production earlier in the spring. No definite date can be set as to early molting. As a general rule, however, the first hens in the flock to molt should be sold, and the last to molt should be kept for breeding purposes.

Hens may be thrown into an early molt by starving while laying heavily; by irregular feeding; by roosting in a house that is poorly ventilated; or in any way that tends suddenly to check egg production. Molt from any of these causes should be avoided, as it is likely to result in a lower total egg production. If the pullets are hatched early, they will be laying in the fall and thus the egg production kept up at all seasons.

Poultry Notes

Teach the chicks to roost, as soon as they are old enough to learn.

Man must keep chickens free from lice and mites because the chickens can't.

Good feeding is important so as to maintain the resisting power of the fowls.

Good ventilation is very essential. If all openings are closed the house will become damp and the air vitiated.

Heavy egg production, like heavy milk production, can only be secured by liberal feeding of a well balanced ration.

During the summer months the colony house should be sprayed at regular int vals. A satisfactory spray can be made of three parts of kerosene and one part of crude carbolic. Coal or tar disinfectants are also satisfactory.

Sodium fluoride, used at the rate of an ounce to a gallon of water, is recommended by specialists for destroying parasites. This should be used on a warm day as a dip, and the birds should be completely immersed in the solution.

Hens should be as well fed when molting as when laying. Growing their new feathers is, if anything, harder on them than producing eggs.

Preventing the parasites by keeping the poultry house clean and by the regular use of dips is much more satisfactory than eradicating them once they have infested the flock. To control mites, the roosts and nests should be painted with carbolineum or some equally effective wood preservative. One treatment each year is usually sufficient.

Ducks consume a great quantity of green food. It is very essential that you put the green food in the ration to insure them getting sufficient. The same holds true with the grit.

The blackhead organism is quite resistant to natural destructive agencies and has been known to live in the soil for long periods of time after turkeys and chickens had been removed from the area. For this reason it is necessary, for success with turkeys, to plan a definite rotation of yards.

Vote for Hoover

THIS is the first time since 1856 that the people of California have had an opportunity of placing a favorite son of the state in the White House and if they lose the chance it may be many years before another opportunity will present itself. The voter is urged to avail himself of this chance and and elect Herbert Hoover, president.

His election would mean much to the state and particularly to the peninsula. Party line should be obliterated in this section in order to give Mr. Hoover a splendid complimentary vote in his home community. Of course, it could not be expected that the strictly partisan voter would change his registration for that particular purpose. Party fealty and loyalty is an American principle that all admire. A man who is disloyal to his party affiliations will be untrue to other principles and should not be trusted in important matters. This appeal is not made to the partisan but to the voter who has a receptive mind and has no party affiliations. This class of voters are urged to cast their ballot in November for Herbert Hoover and Charles Curtis.

The little town of Marion, Ohio, was unknown until Warren G. Harding was chosen president. It sprang into prominence over night and it is said doubled its population in two years. What happened to Marion will happen to this community if Hoover is elected president. Most likely Mr. Hoover would make Stanford University his summer residence, thus moving the business portion of the White House to this community. Thousands would come here from all parts of the United States and from other portions of the world. The material benefits to this section would be incalcuable. The voter may show his or her appreciation of the big opportunity to advance this favored locality by voting for Herbert Hoover who is the Republican nominee and who is one of the ablest men in the country and the best equipped by experience and learning to occupy the White House.

Republicans are urged to be loyal to their party and its nominee and in doing so they will also be loyal to their state and community.

Hoover for Veterans

THE very last man in the world who would consent to a reduction in expenditures in the care and treatment of veterans is Herbert Hoover. This does not mean he would countenance waste or extravagance, but it does mean no man who has earned recognition as a veteran will ever have cause for complaint against Mr. Hoover. He knows the story of the veteran and his record shows he has approved, and heartily so, of what the Coolidge administration has done in liberally caring for service men injured in their country's cause.

The other day Mr. Hoover had occason to discuss matters with a delegation of ex-service men, and they were delighted with his attitude in behalf of the injured soldier. He informed them there was one important division of government where the policy has been to justifiably increase, rather than decrease, expenditures, that division having in charge provision for the comfort of those who fought that this might be a better place in which to live. Assurance to the buddies as to what they may expect, Mr. Hoover, among other things, said:

"There is one important division of the government where the drive for reduction of expeditures has been applied only for economy in administration—not against the veterans. It is the one division where large measures of increased expenditures of the government has taken place during the past seven years. This is as it should be. This government must not be extravagant but it must be just. It has been so, and I should wish it to continue."

Hoover-Curtis Club Is Organized Here

Enrollment Announced in Launching Campaign for Record-Breaking Vote for Republican Leaders

Menlo Park, Sept. 25—At an enthusiastic meeting held yesterday afternoon at Duff and Doyle Hall, the Hoover-Curtis Club of Menlo Park was organized, and plans made for bringing out the maximum Republican vote at the presidential election on November 6.

Mrs. J. J. Garland was elected President of the organization, and announced a program of intensive activity between now and election day. Mrs. E. H. Werthman, chosen secretary-treasurer of the Hoover-Curtis Club, was authorized to enroll as members all in this district who are supporters of the republican candidates. A constitution governing the activity of the club was unanimously adopted.

The vice-president named at the meeting was Mrs. Ella M. Clancy.

On the executive council of the Hoover-Curtis Club are: Officers and Captains of the precinct: Mrs. Arvin Holmes, Mrs. Wells, Miss Meta Kugeler and others yet to be named.

In announcing the aims of the organization, the chairman of the meeting declared that a concerted campaign will be conducted locally to win an overwhelming victory at the polls for Hoover and Curtis.

A very interesting feature of the meeting was the presence of the novelist, Mrs. Ednah Aiken, and of Mrs. Walter Fields of Palo Alto. These ladies described their organization and work of the Palo Alto Hoover-Curtis Club, and were most gracious in their assistance to their neighbor organization.

Among those present at the meeting were: Mesdames Ellen Goldrup, W. L. Bone, J. H. Heltzel, M. A. Glunz, Metcalf, M. H. Buckhaur, E. E. Gardner, Irvin Holmes, W. K. Martin, Ella M. Clancy, D. F. Clancy, Fannie Kurtz, Alice Webb, H. LewisParker, J. J. Garland, E. H. Werthman and Miss Meta Kugeler.

HUNTER GETS FINE FOR SHOOTING UNLAWFULLY

Judge Edward I. McAuliffe gave V. Faenzi a hard wallop on Wednesday for violating the state game laws. Faenzi, whose father is a wholesale crab dealer in San Francisco, was caught by Traffic Officer D. Goulson of Pescadero on September 16 killing game out of season. He was turned over to Game Warden Burke who prosecuted the case. The defendant pleaded guilty and in mitigation of his crime said that he saw a large flock of blackbirds, non-game birds, at a trough near Pescadero. He fired and when the birds had flown there remained on the ground one quail, two meadowlarks and one blackbird. He did not see the quail or larks when he took aim. He also had in his possession five cottontail rabbits. The judge did not believe the unlikely story told by Faenzi as it is a well known fact that quail do not feed with blackbirds. They are enemies. The court sentenced the accused to pay a fine of $150 which he did and went away a wiser and a better man. He assured the court that never again would he violate the game laws.

FARMERS TO VOTE FOR REPRESENTATION

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 27 (CNB) — Membership —75,000 farmers, more than half of all the agriculturalists in the state.

Members doing an annual business aggregaing $200,000,000.

Purposes of the organization, to champion agricultural legislation and further the co-operative farm movement.

Briefly stated, such is the annual report, released today, of the Agricultural Legislative Committee of California, which sponsors farm legislation and is now centering its attention on enactment of Proposition No. 1 on the November ballot, the farm plan of legislative reapportionment.

The report rendered by Secretary Ralph Taylor to President C. C. Teague of Santa Paula, declares that the agricultural committee now embraces in its membership thirty-seven cooperatives and farm commodity organizations.

"The corner-stone of success today, regardless of the industry affected, is co-operation," declared Taylor's report. "And the farmer is progressing in California in direct proportion to his adherence to that policy. The close co-operation of such powerful organizations as the California State Farm Bureau Federation, the California State Grape, the Farmers' Union and the Agricultural Legislative Committee has had a pronounced effect in securing beneficial legislation for agriculture. Furthermore, the oportunity for enactment of sound laws, bearing on some of our most serious agricultural problems, promises to be unusually good at the next session of the legislature.

"The most vital issue today, however, is the enactment of Proposition No. 1, which guarantees the producing areas an equal voice with urban districts in the state legislature. Every farmer, whether or not he is affiliated with one of the farm organizations, should work earnestly and unceasingly from now until election day to assure a "Yes" vote on this most important measure."

STATE SHOWS GAIN IN TAXABLE WEALTH

By LAWRENCE MONFORT
Staff Correspondent

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 27—Literally rolling in wealth, California this year has achieved the record of more than eight billion dollars in taxable wealth—$1600 for each son and daughter—and is increasing that vast fortune at the rate of $1,250,000 daily or 25 cents per inhabitant.

There's no stopping the ship of state, laden with oil, fruits, grains, minerals and other wealth and under charter to deliver his cargo at world ports for profits which will fill another page in the bankbook when 1927 rolls round.

That's the indication of facts issued today by the State Board of of Equalization through its chairman, R. E. Collins of Redding and Dixwell Pierce, its secretary, announcing the total of all taxable property in California as $8,125, 477,579 as compared with $7,685, 881,673 a year ago. It's a gain of 5.7 percent, and largely, but not solely, due to enormous increase in values of city real estate.

San Mateo county, with taxable property worth $51,826,421, Pierce announced, shows a healthy financial condition contributing to the unprecedented gain in riches made by the state.

Assemblage of statistics from the 58 counties show that the farmer ranks foremost as an honest taxayer, the report reveals. The greatest percentage of increase in any class of property assessed this year is shown in the total value of money and solvent credits declared for taxation in the rural districts. The 1928 total of such holdings is 120 percent greater than the corresponding figure in 1927, or $5,354,527 as compared with $2,434,672, Pierce announced. The vaue of the same kind of property assessed in cities likewise showed a gain of 103 percent over the 1927 total of $45,851,062 to $93,354,853.

This is the more interesting inasmuch as the 1925 and 1927 legislative acts creating respectively the seven percent assessment and the $1.45 per hundred tax rate on intangible securities were invalidated by state supreme court decisions and therefore were not applicable to the 1928 assessment rolls. Nevertheless, holders of securities have continued to declare them in large amounts.

Ducks Will Fly and Ducks Will Die

(By CLAUDE FOX)

Are you ready? Foolish question No. 1. Why ask it? Every mother's son with the red blood in his veins who loves the quack of the mallard, the chirp of the male green winged teal, the soft call of the sprig, or in fact the rustle of the wings of every variety of the feather wild birds is not only ready but has been for some time with trigger fingers itching for the opening of the 1928-29 wild duck shooting season on Monday morning October 1st.

Business will be neglected by many men and hundreds of boys who are supposed to be at school will be compelled to attend the funeral of their grandmothers.

Not for some years has the coming of the open season for wild duck shooting looked so promising. Since August 1st hundreds of ducks have been seen just after sun down flying over town to the Spring Valley lakes and on the east side of the bay where numerous clubs have their ponds the waters are covered with birds of the different species, principally sprig.

If the weather remains as it is at this writing the scull-boat hunters will reap a harvest. If, however, the winds should come up during the night or at daybreak the pond shooters will be benefited, while the bay hunters will have to seek shelter at any early hour.

Realizing as I do that accidents in the careless handling of shotguns will probably occur as long as the world exists and fully appreciative of the enthusias mwhich exists with all hunters of wild ducks, I deem it will again be not out of place to sound a note of warning, especially to the younger generation, many of whom are about to start on their first hunt.

Do not load your shotgun until you reach your hunting grounds; unload it just as soon as you have finished shooting; never leave a shotgun loaded in your home; do not grasp your gun by the muzzle, loaded or unloaded; do not under any circumstances climb through or over a fence and pull the gun towards you by the muzzle; never lay the shotgun down under the seat of a boat; do not point your gun towards a companion; keep the muzzle away from you at all times; do not let your enthusiasm get the best of your judgment; keep your head; be careful, as my dad said to me years ago, and when you have done that then be careful some more.

County Democrats Hold Meeting to Plan Campaigns

The democratic county committee held a meeting at San Mateo Saturday afternoon to make plans for the campaigns of all the democratic candidates at the November election. Delegates were present fro mall sections of the county.

George Walsh, chairman of the finance committee, reported that funds were being provided satisfactorily. Mrs. Cecelia Casserly, candidate for Congress on the democratic ticket, was present and pledged $500 to the campaign fund. Walsh also reported the formation of a Smith-Robinson-Casserly club in Menlo Park.

James T. Casey and W. J. Savage of Colma reported that the whole First township was being organized. Wm. Miller reported the formation of a club in Redwood City, and Chairman McGrath stated that San Mateo and Burlingame would be active in organization. Speakers will be provided when requested.

John J. McGrath and J. T. Casey were reported as having been appointed members of the State Central Committee.

A distinguished visitor at the meeting was Frank C. Jordan, secretary of state. Jordan stated that although he was for Hoover, he had met Smith while on a visit to New York and found him a genial and approachable person.

JUDGE DENIES RECOUNT FOR SENATE VOTE

Judge Buck on Monday denied the petition of Joseph F. O'Malley for a recount of the votes cast in this county for state senator on the democratic ticket. It was the contention of Judge Buck in denying the petition for a recount in this county that to grant such a recount would be unfair to George C. Cleveland who secured the republican nomination and the election.

O'Malley is a democrat, but was contested for the democratic nomination by M. B. Johnson, a republican. From the results of the election it would appear that Johnson defeated O'Malley by a small margin for the nomination, but Johnson cannot run as the democratic candidate at the November election as he is a republican. This gives Cleveland the election.

Judge Buck ruled that the recount must be filed in all three counties of the senatorial district which comprises San Mateo, Santa Cruz and San Benito counties.

PUBLIC DEMAND FOR NASH CARS OVERWHELMING

Kenosha Wis., Sept. 27.—Manufacturing facilities in the four great Wisconsin plants of the Nash Motors Company will be increased by $2,000,000 in new buildings and equipment as a result of the overwhelming public demand for the new "400" Series cars, it was announced today.

This extensive expansion program, which will be pushed as rapidly as possible through the fall and winter, is designed not only to increase quality motor car production in the various Nash plants, but also to more nearly balance output in the four manufacturing divisions, according to company officials. The improvements are equally divided between the Special Six and Seaman Body Corporation plants in Milwaukee, the Standard Six plant in Racine, and the Advanced Six plant in Kenosha.

"Since the introduction of the Nash '400' Series models in June," C. H. Bliss, sales manager, said today in commenting on company plans, "all four manufacturing divisions have been operating at capacity in an endeavor to meet the flood of new car orders which has far exceeded all expectations. Night shifts have been employed, and the maximum production has been achieved from the famous Nash production lines, which were augmented last spring by an investment of approximately $2,500,000 in new machinery, jigs and dies. This careful speeding up has increased Nash production by nearly thirty per cent and has set new high records week by week for Nash shipments; but it has still fallen far short of meeting the '400' demand in the United States and abroad.

"August was the biggest production month in the annals of the Nash Motors Company, and September, although affording less working time, is expected to equal the August daily record.

"With the completion of this expansion program, we will be in a position to more nearly meet our heavy sales demands and at the same time maintain the high standards of precision work which have been factors of vital importance in the success of the new cars.

"AERO SHOW" INVITES INTEREST IN AVIATION

Thirty army airplanes under command of Major G. C. Brandt, Crissy field, commandant, circling over Redwood City Airport in combat formation, were one of the major attractions at the Pacific Aero Exposition, which opened here Tuesday. A score of commercial pilots throughout the week were vieing with the army men in a series of tests of their aeronautical skill which will culminate with the awarding on Sunday of cash prizes donated by the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce, the Bank of Italy and E. W. Magruder.

Meanwhile much interest was centering in the Queen Contest in which a dozen peninsula beauties are seeking the royal honors which will be conferred at the Coronation ceremony on Saturday night.

The coronation with its accompanying ball and pageant will be the climactic social event of the exposition week. The throne pavilion will be erected on Webster street, midway between the Fire House and Main and will overlook the scene of the Coronation Ball which will be held on Webster street before the throne. Preceding the coronation a parade of gorgeously illuminated floats will move from Arguello street and Broadway, down Broadway to Main street, down Main to Webster, and down Webster to the throne. The entire route will be illuminated by great flares and by festoons of electric lights. Floats have been entered by a score of Redwood City and peninsula merchants and firms.

Following the parade a pageant depicting the evolution of transportation from primitive Indian drags to the most modern airliner will entertain her majesty. Later there will be an entertainment of dances by dancers and vaudeville artists including tribes of California Indians.

Although Miss Dora Bertolucci of Redwood City was leading the contest at the last count of votes her position was being imperiled by spirited campaigns on the part of her opponents. Miss Isabelle Buzard of Menlo Park was coming swiftly to the front. Miss Edna Mahoney of San Francisco, favorite of the San Francisco Police Department, had moved from third place to a close second, and Mrs. Marie Reel, San Jose entrant, was giving her a close race.

In addition to the Saturday evening honors, the winning girl will receive a valuable prize and a free trip by air to Los Angeles where she may have, if desired, a screen test at one of the moving picture studios. Moreover, she will be entitled to a free course in aviation at the Summit Aircraft School which will turn her out a certified air pilot.

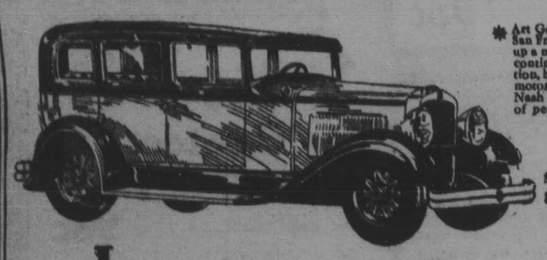
THE WORLD HAS A NEW AND FINER MOTOR CAR



* Art Goebel won the Dole Race from San Francisco to Hawaii, then he hung up a new record for a Coast to Coast continuous flight, with a twin ignition, high compression, valve-in-head motor. And then he bought a new Nash "400," to get the same kind of performance from his motor car.

Special Six "400" Sedan $1345 f. o. b. factory fully equipped

It was a Twin-Ignition Motor

*that carried Lindbergh over the Atlantic, Goebel * over the Pacific, Byrd over the Pole!*

In history-making flights Lindbergh, Byrd, Goebel* and a host of others have established dramatically and conclusively the superiority and reliability of twin ignition, high compression, valve-in-head motor performance.

And all three principles are combined in the great new Nash Twin Ignition Motor which powers every Nash "400" Special and Advanced Six model.

The Nash Twin Ignition Motor, with two ignition coils instead of one, two spark plugs (airplane type) to each cylinder instead of one, 360 sparks a second instead of 180, at top speed, burns the highly compressed gases more thoroughly and economically.

The result is more power from less gasoline, and ordinary gasoline at that. No special, high priced fuels are required for the Twin Ignition Motor.

Once you drive the great new Nash "400," you are certain never to be contented with the performance of older types of motors.

Just like having your Telephone.... brought to you

AN extension telephone is like having your telephone brought to you.

A telephone in the kitchen saves time and steps for market calls. A telephone in the bedroom adds that feeling of comfort and safety for night calls. No finer expression of thoughtfulness than having a telephone in the guest room.

Why delay when you can have one or more of these servants of convenience in your house at additional wages of only a few cents a day?

Simply call our Business Office and say, "I want an extension telephone."

A very great factor in the continued progress and improvement of telephone service is the intangible but quite real spirit of service that has become a tradition in the telephone business.

High School Notes

"One of the Family", a three-act play by Kenneth Webb is to be produced October 27 by the junior class of Sequoia Union high school.

It will be coached by Mrs. Bess Balcomb and Miss Helen Clark, Junior class advisor. The cast will be headed by Enid Mays and Starleigh Thomas, who are to be supported by a large group of assistants.

Journeying by boat, the Sequoia band will leave Monday, October 1, for Sacramento where they will play at the American Legion auditorium. The 35 members of the band will be guests of the Pacific Coast Association of Fire Chiefs' convention.

The travelers, who will take 36 hours on the round trip, will leave Redwood City at 4 p. m. Monday. They are to embark on the "Delta King", and will be home again on Wednesday.

Open to all senior English classes, the annual contest conducted by the University of California starts today. The essays which are to be between 500 and 1000 words, are to be judged on originality, style, and organization.

According to Mrs. Wooldridge the contest closes October 22 but the essays must be submitted a week ahead as this will allow for corrections and typing.

A much coveted ticket to the big game is part of the first prize. The other rewards are a week-end trip to Berkeley and an interview with President Campbell.

Two years ago Ray Mulford, then a student of Sequoia, won the contest and received the same prize.

Difficulties have again risen in the plans for the addition of the new wing that is to be built to Sequoia's present building.

New bids on the general contracting will be opened October 5. The committee hopes to finde $5000 or $6000 cut from the old bids in the new ones which are forthcoming.

A. C. Argo, principal of the high school, stated that if the new bids are low enough, construction will begin immediately after they have been accepted.

The Redwood City Smith-Robinson-Casserly Club will hold a meeting in the Chambers of the Board of Supervisors in the Court House tomorrow evening, at 8 o'clock.

The club was nrgaoized at an enthusiastic meeting last Friday evening, at which time William Miller was elected chairman and Mrs. Elizabeth Anderson, secretary.

Anyone wishing to join the club can do so by attending the meeting Friday evening or by notifying the secretary. Headquarters have been established at 90 Broadway.

Yuba City — Yuba and Sutter counties wil lhave record crop of beans this season.

California was fourth in the list of states producing sand and gravel.

A. S. Kalenborn Hi-Y Speaker

A. S. Kalenborn was the speaker to the Hi-Y club at the regular meeting which was held at the Methodist church. Kalenborn told of his trip to and work in Peru. He explained to the boys the workings of the Panama Canal and the conditions in the various Central and South American countries during the war time.

He told of the marvelous engineering feat that was performed in the building of the Peruvian railroad. At one place the river bed was diverted and run through a tunnel so that there would be room for the railroad to get through a narrow gorge, and at another point the railroad is boxed in so that one of the rivers runs over the top of the road.

Kalenborn's work was in connection with several large mines at an altitude of from twelve to seventeen thousand feet.

New members are being brought into the club at each meeting.

Mrs. Don Bogle was in charge of the excellent dinner which was served.

George Gerhard Talks Before Redwood C. of C.

George W. Gerhard, secretary of the Civic League of Improvement Clubs and Associations of San Francisco, was the speaker at the luncheon meeting of the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce held Monday at the New Canton Cafe.

Gerhard spoke on "City and County Co-operation in Peninsula Development" and his talk was replete with valuable observations upon peninsula matters. Gerhard has served many years in his present position, and in that capacity has come in contact with the many problems confronted by the communities of this section. He urged a closer cooperation between the peninsula communities and San Francisco and dwelt on the great future which awaits this section.

NEW GAME POPULAR WITH FRIENDLY INDIANS

A new game which is "spreading like wildfire" in its popularity with the boys of the Peninsula is being introduced by the Y. M. C. A. thru its Boys' Work Secretary, Roy A. Hohberger. The game is called Friendly Indian Hot Swat. It has in it the elements that boys like in a mass or group game. It develops keen observation and alertness with plenty of speed and action.

The "Friendly Indian Tribes" which are the clubs for the younger boys 9 to 12 years of age under the program of the Y. M. C. A. are being given the game this week. It is adapted to any age boys, however, finding favor with the older as well as the younger boys.

The RED LAMP

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

Copyright by Geo. H. Doran Company WNU Service

SYNOPSIS

Events of the story as set forth in the journal of William A. Porter, professor of English literature:

The professor's uncle, Horace Porter, died mysteriously at his home, Twin Hollows, now the professor's property. Jane, the professor's wife, is a psychic. She insists Uncle Horace, dead for a year, had attended his class reunion and produces a snapshot to prove her contention. Professor Cameron, interested in psychical research, inclines to the idea of psychic photography. With their niece, Edith, the Porters go to Twin Hollows for their vacation, despite Jane's reluctance. A letter Horace had been writing at the time of his death shows that he was interested in spiritualism. It hints of danger. A "red lamp" is mentioned.

Thomas was cutting the lawn, with a mare borrowed for the purpose pulling the old horse mower, and the Oakville constable, Starr, who is also the local carpenter, was replacing old boards with new on the raised walk to the beach.

"Hear you're going to live in the Lodge," said Starr, spitting over the rail.

"Mrs. Porter feels the main house is too large for us."

He eyed me sharply.

"Yes," he said. "Pretty big house. Well, I'm in a dollar on it."

"A dollar?"

"I bet you'd never live in it," he said, and there was a furtive gleam of amusement in his eye as he marked a board preparatory to sawing it.

"It's my opinion, Starr," I said, "that you people around here have talked this place into disrepute."

"Maybe we have," he said, non committally.

"Mr. Horace Porter lived there for twenty years."

"And died there," he reminded me.

"Of chronic heart trouble."

"So the doctor says."

"But you don't think so?"

"I know he had got a right forcible knock on the head, too."

"I thought that came from his fall."

"Well, it may have," he said, and signified the end of the conversation by falling to work with his saw. I waited, but he evidently felt he had said enough, and his further speech was guarded in the extreme. He didn't know whether Mr. Porter had been writing or not when it happened. No, he'd been the first to get there, and he had seen no paper.

Asked if he had had any reason, any experience of his own, to make him wager we would not live in the house, he only shook his head. But as I started back he called after me.

"I don't know as there's any truth in it," he said. "But they do say, on still nights, that he's been heard coughing around the place. I ain't ever heard it myself."

So Thomas thinks that Uncle Horace was frightened to death, and Starr intimates that he was murdered, and all this was seething in the minds of these people a year ago, without it reaching me at all. There had been no inquest; simply, as I recall, Doctor Hayward notifying the coroner by telephone, and giving organic heart disease as the cause.

I was, I admit, startled this morning as I turned back to the main house. But I knew the tendency of small inbred communities to feed on themselves, for lack of outside nutriment, and by the time I had reached the terrace I was putting Starr's statement about a blow in the same class with the cough heard at night.

I turned and went into the house to find that Annie Cochran had turned the blotter and that the last word the poor old boy had written had been "danger."

June 26.

We are settled in the Lodge, and whatever Edith may say as to its romantic outside appearance, within it is frankly hideous. It is all a cottage should not be. From the old parlor organ downstairs to beds that dip in the center above, it is atrocious. Yet tonight Jane is a happy woman.

Can it be that women require rest from their possessions, as for instance I do from my dinner clothes? That it gives them the same sense of freedom to don, speaking figuratively, a parlor organ and the cheapest of other furnishings, as it does me to put on my ancient fishing garments?

Or is Jane simply relieved?

I confess that tonight with Larkin's advertisement for the other house before me, I feel not only in the position of a man attempting to sell a gold brick, but that I have a secret hankering for the gold brick myself.

"For rent for the season, large handsomely furnished house on bay three miles from Oakville. Beautiful location. Thirty-two acres, landscaped. Flower and kitchen gardens. Low rental."

Yet I dare say we shall do well enough. After all, there comes a time when ambition ceases to burn, or romance to stir, and the highest cry of the human heart is for peace. Here, I feel, is peace.

June 27.

I have found Uncle Horace's letter, and in a manner so curious that there can be, it seems to me, but two interpretations of it. One is that, somehow, I have had all along a subconscious knowledge of its presence behind the drawer. But I hesitate to accept that. I am orderly by instinct, and when I went over the desk after his death, the merest indication of a paper caught behind the drawer would have sent me after it.

The other explanation is that I received a telepathic message. It came, as I fancy such messages must come, not from outside but from within. I heard nothing; it welled up, above the incoherent and vague wanderings of a mind not definitely in action, in a clear cut and definite form. "Take out the bottom drawer on the right."

But if I am to accept telepathy, I am to believe that I am not alone in my knowledge of this letter. Yet considering the tone of it, the awful possibility it indicates, who could have such a knowledge and yet keep it to himself?

How did it get behind the drawer? If the brownish smudge on the corner turns out to be blood, and I think it is, then it was placed in the drawer after he died. Annie Cochran and Thomas both deny having seen any paper about. The doctor, perhaps? But would he not have read it first?

It had been crumpled into a ball and thrown into the drawer, and the subsequent opening of the drawer had pushed it back, out of sight. So much is clear.

But—after he fell!

Suppose—and in the privacy of this Journal I may surely let my imagination wander—suppose then, that some other hand picked up this paper, ignorant of its contents, and in a hurried attempt to put the room in order, flung it into the drawer? Or toward the waste basket beside it, and it fell short? Suppose, in a word, that some other hand, again, turned out the dim red lamp in the next room, or left it to see the way to escape?

I must not let my nerves run away with me. Murder is an ugly word, and after all we have Hayward's verdict of death by heart failure. But a sufficient shock or a blow, might have brought that on. Fright, even, for the poor old chap was frightened when he wrote that letter. Trembling but uncompromising. That was like him.

"I realize fully the unpleasantness of my own situation; even, if you are consistent, its danger. But—"

But what? But in spite of this I shall do as I have threatened, probably.

I am profoundly moved tonight. We did not love one another, but he was old and alone, and menaced by some monstrous wickedness. Just what that wickedness was no one can say, but I fully believe tonight that he died of it. . . .

I began to go through the desk once more. All important papers had been taken away after the death, and the drawers contained the usual riffraff of such depositories, old keys, ancient check books, their stubs filled in Uncle Horace's neat hand.

Naturally, I was thinking of him. More or less, I was concentrated on him, if this is any comfort to my spiritualistic friends. He had, indeed, fallen out of the very chair in which I sat when he was stricken, and had apparently cut his head badly on the corner of the desk. All this was in my mind, as I closed the last drawer and surveyed the heap of rubbish on the desk.

I suppose I was subconciously reconstructing the night of his death, when he had penned that word "danger" which now lay, clearly outlined in reverse, on the blotter. And that when I wandered into the den, looking for a place to store what Lear calls the detritus piled up on the desk, I was still thinking of it. But I cannot feel that my entrance into the room, or my idly switching on the red lamp which stood there, had the slightest connection with the message I seemed at that moment to receive: "Take out the bottom drawer on the right."

I have heard people who believe in this sort of thing emphasize the peculiar insistence of the messages, and this was true in this case. I do not recall that there was any question in my mind, either, as to which bottom drawer on the right I was to remove. And behind the drawer I found the letter.

(Note: I made no copy of the letter in the original Journal, so I give it here.)

Unfinished letter of Mr. Horace Porter, addressed to some one unknown, and dated the day of his death, June 27 of the preceding year:

"I am writing this in great distress of mind, and in what I feel is a righteous anger. It is incredible to me that you cannot see the wickedness of the course you have proposed.

"And Died There," He Reminded Me

"In all earnestness I appeal to you to consider the enormity of the idea. Your failure to comprehend my own attitude to it, however, makes me believe that you may be tempted to go on with it. In that case I shall feel it my duty, not only to go to the police but to warn society in general.

"I realize fully the unpleasantness of my own situation; even if you are consistent, its danger. But—"

The letter had not been finished.

June 28.

I slept very little last night, and this morning made an excuse to go up to town with the letter. Larkin had telephoned me that he had an inquiry on the house through Cameron, and this gave me a pretext.

Larkin is impressed with the letter, but does not necessarily see its connection with Uncle Horace's death. "You haven't an idea who it's meant for, you say?"

"Not the slightest. He hadn't any friends, intimates, so far as I know. The Livingstones, very decent people with a big place about six miles from him, his doctor, and myself—that's about all."

"'Enormity of the idea,'" he read again. "Of course that might be a new poison gas, or this thing the press is always scaring up, the death ray. Some fellow with a bee in his bonnet, you may be sure."

"That wouldn't imply danger to himself."

"Any fellow with a bee in his bonnet is dangerous," he said, and gave me back the letter.

"Of course," he went on, "you've made a nice point about the stain on the corner. If it's blood, it's hardly likely he got up again and put it where you found it. But I think you'll find the servant there, what's her name, picked it up in her excitement and threw it into the drawer. However, if you like, I'll have that stain tested and see what it is."

I tore off the corner, and left him putting it carefully into an envelope. He glanced up as I prepared to go.

"What's this I hear about your keeping off demons by drawing some sort of a cabalistic design around yourself?" he asked. "You'd better let me in on it; I need a refuge now and then."

Which proves that a man may shout the eternal virtues and be unheard forever, but if he babble nonsense in a wilderness it will travel around the world.

We have settled down into our routine here very comfortably. Our eggs and milk are brought each morning by a buxom farmer's daughter, one Maggie Morrison, a sturdy red-cheeked girl.

With the lawns cut and the shrubbery trimmed, the place grows increasingly lovely. At low tide the beach is covered with odds and ends from the mysterious life of the sea, red and white starfish, sea urchins, and disintegrated jelly fish. Sea-gulls pick up mussels, hover over a flat-topped rock, drop them onto its surface and then swoop down upon the broken shell, with a warning cry to other gulls to keep away.

The boathouse is ready for young Halliday. Edith has put in it a great deal of love and one or two of my most treasured personal possessions.

"That isn't by any chance my smoking stand?"

"But you aren't going to smoke much this summer, Father William," she says, and tucks a hand into my arm, "I heard you say so yourself."

It has a sitting room, bedroom and kitchenette, but no bath.

"He can use the sea," says Edith, easily. "And take a cake of soap in with him."

"And wash himself ashore," I suggest, and am frowned down, probably too old for such ribaldry.

Jane is very serene. Now and then, as she sits on our small veranda with her tapestry, I see her raise her eyes and glance toward the other house, but she does not mention it, nor do I.

But she absolutely refused to take the pictures of the house Larkin had asked for. Not that she put it like that.

"I haven't had any luck with the camera lately," she said. "You take them, or let Edith do it."

The result of the collaboration, which followed early this afternoon is still in doubt. Jane intends to develop and print them this evening.

And so our life goes on. We retire early, I generally slightly scented from the cold cream of Edith's good-night kiss. Clara, our household staff, too, goes up early, probably looking under her bed before retiring into it. And Jane sits and sews while I make my nightly entry in this Journal; she is, I think, both jealous and faintly suspicious of it!

At ten o'clock or so we let Jock out, and he looks toward the main house and then turns out the gates and into the highroad, where for a half hour or so he chases rabbits and possibly looks for a bear. At ten-thirty he scratches at the door, and we admit him and go up to bed.

Later: I have just had a surprise amounting to shock. Jane finds she has forgotten the black japanned lantern with a red slide which she uses in the mysterious rites of developing pictures, and suggests that we go to the other house and use the red lamp there.

"But I can bring it here."

"I am through being silly about the other house, William," she says with an air of resolution. "Anyhow, the pantry there is better, and you can sit in the kitchen. Bring a book or something."

She has, poor Jane, very much the air of Helena Lear's kitten the day Jock cornered it and it came out resolutely and looked him in the eye. In effect, Jane is going out to meet her bugaboo and stare it down.

June 29.

Jane is in bed today, and I am not all I might be, although I managed to get an indifferent print or two to Larkin this morning.

It is well enough for cold-blooded and nerveless individuals to speak of fear as a survival of that time when in our savage state, we were surrounded by enemies, dangers, and a thousand portents in skies we could not comprehend, and to insist that when knowledge comes in at the door, fear and superstition fly out of the window.

It is only in his head that man is heroic; in the pit of his stomach he is always a coward.

Yet, stripped of its trimmings—the empty, echoing house, its reputation, and my own private thoughts about its possible tragedy, the incident loses much of its terror; is capable, indeed, of a quite normal explanation.

That is, that Jane either saw some one outside the pantry window, or was the victim of a subjective image of her own producing.

To put the affair in consecutive shape.

At eleven o'clock I had moved the red lamp from the den in the other house to the pantry and there connected it. Jane seemed to be going very well beyond the pantry door, and after a time I ceased the reassuring whistling with which I had been affirming my continued presence within call, and grew absorbed in a book.

It must have been 11:15 when she called out to me sharply to know where a cold wind was coming from, and although I felt no such air I closed the kitchen door. It was within a couple of minutes of that, or thereabouts, that I suddenly heard her give a low moan, and the next instant there was the crash of a falling body.

When I opened the pantry door I found her in a dead faint, underneath the window. When she revived, she maintained that she had seen Uncle Horace.

Her statement runs about as follows: She had not felt particularly uneasy on entering the house, "although I had expected to," she admits. Nor at the beginning of operations in the pantry. The cold air, however, had had a peculiar quality to it; it "froze" her, she says; she felt rigid with it.

And it continued after she heard me close the kitchen door.

This wind, she says, was not only so cold that she called to me, but she had an impression that it was coming from somewhere near at hand, and she seemed to see the curtains blowing out at the window. The lower sash was down, as she could tell by the reflection of the red lamp in it, but she went to the window to see if the upper sash had been lowered.

With the darkness outside, the glass had become a sort of mirror, and she said her own figure in it startled her for a moment. She stood staring at it, when she realized that she was not alone in the room. Clearly reflected, behind and over her right shoulder, was a face.

It disappeared almost immediately, and I have my own private doubts about her recognition of it as Uncle Horace, which I believe is post facto. But I am obliged to admit that Jane saw something, either outside the window and looking in, or the creation of her own excited fancy.

As soon as I could leave her I went outside, but I could find no one there, and this morning I find that my own footprints under the window have entirely obliterated anything else that may have been there.

Jane herself believes it was Uncle Horace, but I cannot find that she received anything more than an indistinct impression of a face. She rather startled me this morning, however, by asking me if I had ever thought that Uncle Horace had not died a natural death.

"Why in the world should I think such a thing?"

But pressed for an explanation she merely said she had heard that the spirits of those who have died violent deaths are more likely to appear than of others who have passed peaceably away; that the desire to acquaint the world with the circumstances of the tragedy is overwhelming!

What seems much more likely is that she has caught from me, with that queer gift of hers, some inkling of my own anxiety.

Larkin's report from the laboratory shows that the stain on the corner of the letter is blood. One lives and learns. Not only does the report state that it is blood, but that it is human blood. Moreover, that it is about a year old, and that it is the imprint of a human finger, but is too badly blurred for identification, as it was made while the blood was fresh.

So does science come to the aid of the police today. Truly one lives and learns.

June 30.

I have been brought today, for the first time, into active contact with the feeling of the country people against my house, and especially against the red lamp. It is an amazing situation.

Thomas came to the doorway this morning while I was at breakfast, followed by Starr the constable, who remained somewhat uneasily behind him. It developed that half a dozen sheep in a meadow beyond Robinson's point, were found the night before last with their throats cut. The farmer who owned them heard them milling about and ran out, and he declares he saw a dark figure dart out of the field and run into my woods at the head of Robinson's point.

It appears that the farmer, whose name is Nylie, abandoned the pursuit as soon as he saw where the fugitive was headed, and went back to his dead sheep. They were neatly laid out in a row.

"At what time was all this?" I asked.

"Eleven o'clock, or thereabouts."

"How about a dog?" I asked. "They kill sheep, don't they? Catch them by the throat or something?"

"They don't stab them with a knife. Not around here, anyhow," said Starr.

The ostensible object of the visit was to ask if we had been disturbed that night, and for some reason or other I did not at once connect the situation with Jane's curious experience.

"No," I said. "You'll probably find that Nylie has an enemy somewhere, some hand he has discharged, perhaps."

Broke Into Game as Holdout

GEORGE EARNSHAW, the large right-hander who pitched a three-hit coat of whitewash for his first victory in the big leagues, is the one ball player known in history who started his career in organized baseball as a holdout. That is something that never happened before or since. Listen to his story.

"When I was in my sophomore year at Swarthmore I received an offer to pitch for the Baltimore Orioles. At the time I was more interested in finishing my college work and never thought of playing ball professionally. When I was graduated they came after me again.

George Earnshaw.

"But I fought them off and took a job up in Newark. I received a pretty good salary and pitched a couple of games a week for semi-pro teams that brought me in $50 and $100 at a crack. Still the Orioles kept after me all that summer and pestered me the following spring. Finally, that year, Jack Dunn himself came up to see me.

"I told him what I was making by just pitching on the side and holding down a regular job. We talked for quite a while and I thought to myself, 'I'll fix this fellow.' He had told me to name my salary. So I figured out a sum that I thought would send him back to Baltimore talking to himself. I told him I'd join the Orioles for a salary of $900 a month.

"'Holy smokes!' he roared in that falsetto voice of his, 'that's more than I pay anybody on the team. You're asking for a major league salary and you haven't pitched a game yet!' I did have him talking to himself.

"Dunnie thought it over for a while and then he gave me a jolt that knocked me off my pins. He said: 'All right! I'll go broke paying you that dough, but I've been trying to hook you for two years, and now I've got you. I'll pay you $900 a month and we'll fill the contract out right now. Then I'll go with you while you tell those people you are quitting work to play.'"

The first semi-professional game that George Earnshaw ever pitched was for the Strawbridge & Clothier team of Philadelphia and was against an all-star collection of big leaguers managed by Earl Mack. It was during the days following the "Work or Fight!" edict issued by Washington during the war. George Earnshaw was only seventeen years old, but he easily vanquished the big leaguers.

Big Mistake Dismissing Pitcher Walter Ruether

Not much has been written about Yankee mistakes in the last few years, but they certainly made a serious one when they dismissed Pitcher Walter Ruether, comments James C. Isaminger in the Philadelphia Inquirer. The latter won pivotal battles for the Yanks in 1927, but nevertheless he was not reengaged for this year.

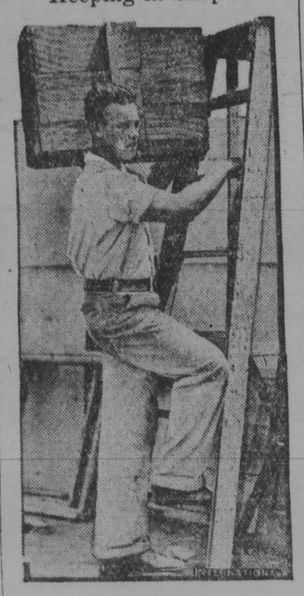
But the season was not very old when Manager Huggins was to realize that he had erred in so precipitately discharging a reliable pitcher and hard hitter as Ruether.

The latter became a free agent and Connie Mack made him a good offer to join the Athletics' staff, but the veteran, disgusted over his treatment, decided to join the San Francisco club where he had his start many years ago.

With the Seals this year, Ruether pitched them to the pennant in the first half of the split season and seems to be doing the same in the second half.

Had he been with the Yanks this season, Miller Huggins would not have been moved to lament over his shortage of pitchers.

Keeping in Shape



Lessons in keeping fit: what football heroes do in the summer time might be a good caption for this genuine shot of Jess Hibbs, captain-elect of the University of Southern California grid squad and All-American tackle, as he keeps fit for the fall's activity by working for a construction company. Hibbs plans to build himself up to 200 pounds to start the season.

St. Louis Infielder Was Unable to Tell Colors

Here is one they tell on a certain infielder of the St. Louis Browns: Sam Gray was pitching and Lu Blue playing first base. A ball was hit to this infielder; Blue went over to back him up, and Gray made haste to cover first base.

The infielder got the ball, then made a senseless throw in the general direction of nowhere.

"Why in the name of Gawd," said Manager Dan Howley, "didn't you make the throw to Gray at first?"

"Well, manager," allibied the infielder, "I guess I am color blind. I couldn't tell Gray from Blue, and so I just shut my eyes and threw."

Use Distance Markers

The New York Yankees have started something in their ball park by putting distance markers all over the outskirts of the field and fans may judge approximately the distance of hits. But what can they do about Babe Ruth who does not confine many of his drives to the field? Rud Rennie, in writing an account of the first game with the signs says "Combs hit a 425 foot triple and scored on Koenig's 230-foot sacrifice fly." Fouls can be counted the same way.

Robert Quinn, president of the Red Sox, announces that Bill Carrigan has signed to manage the club for the 1929 season.

Arndt Jorgens, catcher of the Oklahoma City club of the Western league, has been sold to the New York Yankees.

The Cubs have obtained Pitcher Bruce Cunningham of the Los Angeles club. His sale price was reported at $20,000.

Jack Milligan, former Cornell and Syracuse pitcher, is with the Phillies now. The Giants beat him in his major league debut.

Guy Sturdy, St. Louis Browns' utility first baseman, has been sent to the Milwaukee American association club under option.

Jess Altenburg, veteran, has quit as manager of the Hanover club of the Blue Ridge league. George Hammen succeeded him.

Ebb and Bob James, twins, are members of the Selma club in the Southeastern league. Ebb is a catcher and Bob a first baseman.

Sports writers around the eastern league consider Sam Byrd, owned by the Yankees, as the best outfielder in that circuit this year.

Ralph Stewart, righthanded pitcher of the Montgomery club, Southeastern league, has been sold to the Birmingham (Southern association) club.

As a result of federal investigations, it is found that $50,000,000 is collected annually throughout the United States in baseball and sports pools.

Outfielder Adam Comorosky, who was farmed by the Pittsburgh Nationals to the Indianapolis American association team early this year, has been recalled.

Art Fox has been signed to coach the Williams baseball squad again next spring. It will be his third season. He also assists in football and basket ball.

Gerald Hayes, who has been umpiring for 21 years, boasts of service in the International league, American association, Pacific Coast league and Texas league.

* * *

Earle Combs, Yankee outfielder, does not drink, smoke, cuss or play cards for money and takes more than a passing interest in the Bible. In fact, he started out to become a college professor.

* * *

The Cubs hold the unique distinction of winning more than 100 games in a season, yet failing to win the pennant. In 1909 the club won 104 games and lost 49, but finished six games behind the Pirates.

* * *

Jack Onslow, Cardinals' coach, has figured in twelve minor and major league pennant championships during his career of seventeen years in baseball. This year he hopes to "cut himself another piece of cake."

* * *

The sale of Matt Donohue, Omaha Western league outfielder, to the Kansas City Blues of the American association is announced.

Byrne E. James, for the last two years a member of the Omaha club of the Western league, has been sold to the Boston Nationals.

George Burns, one time New York Giants star, who resigned as manager of the Williamsport Grays, has signed to manage the Hanover (Pa.) Raiders of the Blue Ridge league.

HUGE CROWDS TO SEE IRISH PLAY

Notre Dame Expected to Play Before 350,000.

That Notre Dame's famous Fightin' Irish football team will play before 350,000 people during the fall of 1928 is the theory of J. Arthur Haley, business manager of athletics at the university, following two weeks of intensive work acknowledging applications for tickets.

Haley and his staff of assistants began to receive applications for the 1928 tickets on August 1, and the indications are that every game in which the Irish appear will draw a capacity crowd. In addition to three home games, the Notre Dame squad will journey to enemy stadiums for six contests.

Special interest is being shown in the Navy game, which will be played at Soldier field, Chicago, on October 13. Last year Notre Dame played Southern California at Soldier field on the last Saturday in November and 117,000 people witnessed the game. Twelve thousand additional seats have been installed at the stadium and Haley says that 120,000 seats will be sold. The Notre Dame athletic office has been besieged with requests for tickets to this game, and it is likely that the Navy-Irish tilt will be the most colorful of the 1928 season.

Memories of the 1926 season, when Carnegie Tech unexpectedly defeated the Irish team, which was then headed for another national title, have served to step up the interest in the Scotch-Irish game, which will be played on Cartier field, November 17. It is the last home game of the season. Haley predicts that this game will be sold out before November 1.

Messages from Los Angeles state that the Southern California-Notre Dame game will be the biggest drawing card the Pacific coast has ever had. The Trojans and their retinue are still stinging under their 7-6 defeat of last fall and will pack the stadium to see the old rivals fight it out again.

Field Goal Seems to Be Passing on in Grid Game

That ancient institution of the gridiron, the field goal, seems to be passing on. Only on rare occasions has it been resorted to, this year, although it is one of the most dramatic, often thrilling plays of the college football repertoire.

Three circumstances have combined to nullify the field goal. The most important one and the most recent, is that example of rule-making wisdom which caused the goal bar to be set back ten yards behind the goal line. This compels the goal kicker to boot the ball ten yards further on each kick, than formerly.

Another reason is the fact that a field goal nets only half the score that a forward pass yields, when a touchdown is scored.

And the final argument is that the loss of the ball invariably follows the failure of a field goal, whereas a try for a scoring forward pass is usually penalized by the loss of one down, merely.

Only when a team's forward passing attack has been nullified by an opponent or when the point after a touch down is to be scored, do teams today fall back on the placement or the drop kick.

Is THIRTY the Love Deadline?

Charles G. Shaw was born in New York City in May, 1892, and received his early education at the Friends' Seminary, later entering the Sheffield Scientific school of Yale university, from which he was graduated in 1914. The following year he spent at the School of Agriculture at Columbia and in 1916-17 wrote articles for various magazines. During the World war he trained at Kelly field, Texas, and served overseas as lieutenant with the Three Hundred and Thirty-fifth aero squadron, A. E. F., returning home shortly after the Armistice. He has been writing steadily since 1921. He has composed over five hundred notes on the subject of love and written under seven different pseudonyms. Mr. Shaw lives in New York and is still a bachelor.

By CHARLES G. SHAW

According to the able and distinguished Dr. Will Durant, love is a hopeless business for him who has ultimately arrived at the great age of thirty. To which asseveration I make so bold as to object. I object, what is more, for the following crystallized (and, I believe, pertinent reasons:

1. Love, among several hundreds of other things, means understandings, sympathy, and consideration. None of these qualities is in the least peculiar to youth.

2. During adolescent love, jealousies, all too frequently, play unhappy but important roles. Neither of the twain involved is at all sure of the other; indeed it is rare that either is even sure of him (or her) self. Doubt and suspicion are the double-headed issue, a destructive offspring and corrosive to romance. Free from these youthful misgivings, the fellow of middle-age will necessarily view matters in a more humane and tolerant light. Forgiveness is begot with years.

3. Love means appreciation. The appreciation of youth is never equal to that of middle-age.

4. To a man over thirty, love at once becomes a far more serious undertaking, and, though admittedly a condition less frequently experienced than in the case of a man under thirty, when experienced, cuts deeper into the heart. The younger fellow half the time will cajole himself that he is in love. There is no such nonsense for the other. He knows it.

5. The assumption that a man over thirty is incapable of love is the assumption that love is a mere flash in the pan, an emotional comet. But love is not a question of a few months. Nor, for that matter, of a few years. Love is the study of a lifetime.

6. Love leans upon beauty. And rare is he who is able to behold in his twenties the beauties that exist for him in subsequent years.

7. The estimable Doctor Durant declares that "a man above thirty may go wild over a blond 'chorine'," and adds: "That is not love." To the latter statement I agree. As to the former, the phrase: "go wild" is for youth, not for middle-age.

8. The doctor is of the belief, too, that one should marry at the "natural" age—in other words, the "silly" age. Yet would it not seem there are already enough divorces due to "silly" age marriages?

9. Love, for a woman, includes a touch of importance in the man. Importance comes to few of us before the first thirty years.

10. For the man over thirty, love assumes a soberer and more stable mien. He has tramped further along the road of experience and, hence, all other things being equal, will fail to succumb with the same degree of ease as his younger brother. Moreover, his falling in love is more exacting. His is the subtler skill also in the tendernesses of amour, which art, incidentally, must be learned as all other arts, for while one's groundwork, garnered in the flush of youth, is undubitably necessary, it is the technique acquired in riper years that lends the essential quality to the prime product. Behind lies that ephemeral period (Doctor Durant's "natural" age), when the first comeither wink of a shingle-headed flapper caused our hero to swallow his wad of chewing gum, clutch his coat just below the handkerchief pocket, and rush headlong to the nearest jeweler's.

11. It is a different type of love, true enough, that comes to a man after thirty. But surely it is a solider, saner, and stauncher type—a love, in fine, that makes for the possibilities of an ever-enduring devotion.

12. In conclusion, I would note the names of a few men over thirty, who it would appear, have most certainly been capable of falling in love—to wit: Robert Browning, at the age of thirty-three; Honore de Balzac, at thirty-four; Otto Eduard Leopold von Bismarck at thirty-one; Horatio Nelson, at forty! Aaron Burr, at thirty-eight; Heinrich Heine, at thirty-seven; Francois Marie Arouet de Voltaire, at thirty-nine; Johann Wolfgang von Goethe, at thirty-eight; Blaise Pascal, at thirty-one; Jean Jacques Rousseau, at thirty-three; Napoleon I, at forty-one; Goya y Lucientes, at forty-five; Julius Caesar, at fifty-two; Louis XIV, at forty-two; Wilhelm Richard Wagner, at fifty-seven! Luigi Cornaro, at seventy-nine; Thomas Parr, at eighty . . . But why continue? History, the arts, science, government, industry—life in all its phases—is rich with such examples.

Camel Pays His Way

New York.—Mogul, the white dromedary camel (camelus dromedarius), who is eight years old and weighs 1,600 pounds, is the only self-supporting member of the Bronx Zoological garden family. Few of the thousands of rare animals in the zoo contribute much else besides their presence to their board and lodging. This camel is a grand mogul of finance as well as in name.

The method Mogul employs in earning his fodder is to play taxi for the thousands of little children who daily come to the zoological park.

His keeper used to allow the little tots to climb up and take rides at will, but demands for a camel walk with Mogul became so great that park officials had to devise some means of dispensing the shaggy fellow's popularity.

Mogul carries six kiddies at a time on the two-sided Irish jaunting seat which was rigged up to fit his single dromedary hump. The charge is ten cents and hundreds ride weekly. Mogul operates from May to September, resting on Mondays. The other seven months he vacations in the antelope house.

The sway-backed giant has had an unique military career in the antipodes. Several years ago, before coming to New York, he was honorably discharged from the British army. He was in the Anzac transportation forces over the desert lands of Australia. Mogul, however, is a native of northern Africa.

William T. Cully, Mogul's keeper, said that his charge in three years had earned between three and five thousand dollars for the zoo. He cost $1,000, and seems to have paid for himself several times over.

Mogul is a vegetarian, and, in true camel fashion, has been known to stay off the water wagon for eight days running. His two toenails on each foot have to be manicured about once a month by the keeper. This leisurely camel has an amiable disposition and plods about all day, chewing his cud and occasionally giving vent to his camel chuckle, which sounds like some one gurgling water.

At night, after a profitable day, Mogul doubles his legs under his haunches and retires comfortably on his nature provided, skin padded shock absorbers.

Mogul has proven a good investment, and a considerable clientele patronize his cantering delights when their parents bring them to the zoo. Alice, the aged elephant, was his only rival until she was retired from passenger service two years ago.

Ancient Stone Lion Still Rules Babylon

Babylon, Mesopotamia.—The Lion of Babylon still broods over the ruins of the once mighty city. Carved solidly in stone and resting heavily on its haunches, the beast gazes impassively on the remnants of the dead metropolis.

Members of the Field museum-Oxford university joint expedition visited the ruins at the conclusion of their season's work of excavating the neighboring city of Kish, near the Euphrates. Kish was the first city founded after the biblical flood, ancient inscriptions declare.

Near the lion is the great pyramid mound in Borsippa, in a suburb of Babylon. With its seven stages, this is said to be one of the possible sites of the tower of Babel mentioned in Genesis.

Also close to the ponderous leonine figure are the ruins of El-Kasr, said to have been the palace of Nebuchadnezzar, ruler when Babylon was at the summit of its glory.

Beneath the figure of the lion lies a human shape, whether man or woman no one knows, and none can tell the significance of the two except to suggest that the Lion of Babylon is crushing the rest of mankind.

In the Stretch—Who's in Front?

Farmers Give Up Field for Mart

Portland, Maine.—The New England farmer, long hiding his gift for advertising, has kicked over the well-known bucket and set his light on the highway. There it shines in fantastic fashion, illuminating a new order of agriculture.

Its outward garb is an elaborate system of signs, picturesque placards and posters, that swamp the road-weary traveler. They fairly shriek the excellence of roadside comestibles. Artistic, grotesque or merely present, they strive for a common end—assiduous harvesting of the tourist crop.

And the avidity with which the rural Easterner attends to business attests the efficacy of his art as an advertiser. From dawn until long after dark, hands that once steadied the plow handle cut eager circles with the handle of a gas pump. Voices that once cajoled the sweat-flecked and recalcitrant steed now vent their persuasive power on the stranger who seeks rest and refreshment.

Why swelter through a midsummer day in the hayfield, argues the farmer with profitable materialism, when the passing throng clamors to shed ready cash for buttermilk and watermelons?

Each year finds increasingly large numbers of farmers branching out into roadside enterprises. The ingenuity that formerly went into wrestling with the routine of the Pilgrims now is called upon to halt and hold the prospective patron of country cuisine.

So large that those who speed may read, so ambitious in design, and so heroic in expression that none pass unnoticed, the farmers' "ads" lure the hungry, the tired and the merely curious with inescapable appeal.

THE WONDERS OF SCIENCE

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

ONCE I was incredulous; when people told me what science had done or could do in time, I shook my head, I didn't believe it, but I've come to the point now of believing anything I am told concerning scientific accomplishment. Some day soon somebody is going to invent a machine that will reveal to everyone what I'm thinking about—a thing I don't always quite know myself.

When we speak of the wonders of science we think naturally of the radio and the telephone and television and wireless telegraphy and all the amazing things which have been done with chemistry and electricity, but it is not of these that I am thinking most. I am staggered by what has been done, or has been said to be done, with the human body and the human mind.

The Bible tells us that when the Lord created woman he caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam and took a rib from his side and out of that He formed a woman. Well, scientists haven't gone quite as far as that, but there is a long time ahead yet. Wilkins had his nose scattered pretty much all over his face in a football scrimmage when he was a senior in college. It was surely a complete wreck. He came in to see me not long ago with a perfectly beautiful nose on his face—the sort you read about in love stories and romance. Briefly, Wilkins' surgeon had given him an anesthetic, had taken out a piece of his rib and with it had fixed up a perfectly good nose for him.

I read a story the other day of a child born without arms. The doctor dug down and found some stumps of arms, dragged them out and attached artificial arms to the stumps and the child was able to get on quite satisfactorily. Some day they'll learn how to grow arms just as a starfish does. If you lack or lose an organ now there seems some easy way of supplying it. They graft on ears, shorten and lengthen legs, take out all unnecessary parts, and supply new ones to order.

I listened to a psychiatrist last week—a really enthusiastic one—who told what is now being done to the human mind. There is nothing, or next to nothing, to heredity, he asserts; it's all in environment and even if that's wrong, he can fix it. All our mental fears and weaknesses and shortcomings he assured us could be simply adjusted by a few easy treatments. He could take a girl, for instance, who is afraid of mice or snakes, and by finding out what happened to her when she was little, he could fix things so she would walk right up to a mouse or a snake and pat it on the back—gentle like, you know. He told of a man who had an awful temper. He'd wreck the furniture when he was in a tantrum and break up the dishes. The psychiatrist made a few passes and the fellow was as gentle as an oyster. There isn't anything impossible now, even with the dumb ones.

And some of it is really true!

Needle Imbedded in Man's Heart Is Taken Out

Buffalo, N. Y.—Morgan Downey, twenty, is recovering in a hospital here after an operation for removal of a gold-tipped needle imbedded in his heart.

In the operation an opening was cut in the chest wall and the sac protecting the heart was opened. With his fingers the doctor was able to touch the tip of the needle in the back of the heart when the organ contracted.

It required 75 minutes to gain a firm hold and dislodge the needle.

The needle was in the mattress of Downey's bed and in some manner pierced him. Downey attempted to pry it out but instead forced the sharp sliver of steel further into his body.

Subsequent examinations showed the heart in its contractions had drawn the needle further into itself.

Recent investigations indicate that more than 80 per cent of the heart trouble of young people is a result of some form of rheumatism.

Great Flying Field

St. Louis.—St. Louis has begun to liquidate its debt of gratitude to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, which largely will be repaid with the completion of the new $2,000,000 municipal airport.

Hardly had the ink dried on the tabulation sheets of the recent vote on airport bonds before construction work had begun. The favorable vote of nearly 5 to 1 was a tribute to the aviation activities of Lindbergh, whose epochal flight to Paris was financed by St. Louisans.

The airdrome will be the equal of any in the world, its builders claim. The field contains 693 acres—more than a square mile—and will have a passenger terminal of proportions that a year ago would have astounded the most air-minded of voters.

The passenger station will have waiting rooms, a safe, roof garden and a shed 200 feet wide where planes will take on and discharge passengers. High above it will rise a control tower, office of the field dispatcher. There also will be offices for flying field executives.

Hangars, machine shops and buildings for radio and photographic work will be other structures in connection with the airdrome. Two airplane manufacturing companies already are building factories on the field.

The low purchase price of land, adjacent to the Lambert-St. Louis field, which is the nucleus of the new airport, will permit more than $1,500,000 of the $2,000,000 to be spent on runways and buildings.

There will be four runways, almost a mile long and 200 yards wide. They will permit planes of any size to land or take off from any of the eight points of the compass.

Besides accommodations for commercial companies there will be hangars and machine shops for the reserve officers corps flying squadron and the naval reserve flying squadron.

Small Tennessee Farm Makes Profit on Sheep

Alamo, Tenn. — Eth Humphreys, farmer, $500 richer this year from the sale of wool and lambs, has aroused the interest of his neighbors with the declaration that a profitable sheep-raising business may be started on Tennessee farms for an initial outlay less than $300.

Speaking of his own experience, Humphreys recalls that with very little investment he has built up a business in which the value of half the lambs he raises is equal to the cost of keeping the entire flock. He attributes his success to careful selection of stock and the provision of suitable grazing and housing. Registered rams and high-grade ewes were the nucleus of his flock.

About twenty ewes and one sire, he says, is best for the small farmer who starts a sheep-raising enterprise. Greater profits will be shown, he believes, if the farmer raises his own feed, or at least most of it.

Bird in London Zoo Contracts Tea Habit

London!—Americans know how universal is the tea habit in England—that every one, from plasterer to prime minister, from charwoman to chess champion, takes time out every day for tea. The custom is now spreadin, to animals. Family pets, cats, dogs, parrots and canaries, are often given tea instead of water.

London's champion animal tea drinker is said to be a bird at the zoo—a rare species called the touraco or plantain eater. This touraco, that has been christened Doctor Johnson, insists on tea with every meal, and has given up water entirely.

Famous Indian Epics

The two great epics of ancient India are the Mahabharata and the Ramayana.

TUNNEY WINS AGAIN

Gene Tunney, retired heavyweight champion of the world, astonished a distinguished literary audience in London with an after dinner talk which for clearness of thought and distinction of phrase was admitted by the assembled masters of phrasemaking to be a complete knockout.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

The Ears of Fish

The ears of fish are internal and consist of a very thin tissue corresponding to the human eardrum and housed inside a gristley substance. In some types of fish, what was once a real gill has given up the function of breathing for that of hearing and now transmits sounds to the inner ear.

HELPED DURING MIDDLE AGE

Woman Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Denver, Colo.—"I have taken six bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and will take more. I am taking it as a tonic to help me through the Change of Life and I am telling many of my friends to take it as I found nothing before this to help me. I had so many bad feelings at night that I could not sleep and for two years I could not go down town because I was afraid of falling. My mother took the Vegetable Compound years ago with good results and now I am taking it during the Change of Life and recommend it."—Mrs. T. A. Muller, 1611 Adams Street, Denver, Colorado.

Ernest Chandler has returned from a hospital at San Jose where he was operated upon two weeks ago for appendicitis. He will soon be able to greet his friends at his father's groceteria.

Diogenese no longer need to go about with his lantern looking for an honest man. He has been found in Menlo Park. His name is John R. Broadwood, employed by the Shell Oil Company here. Recently a welthy tourist dropped a wallet in the company's rest room and went away to San Francisco. That evening he discovered his loss and at once returned to Menlo Park in search of his purse. He inquired at the oil station when young Broadwood stepped up and gave him the plethoric package. Broadwood was offered a sum of money for his honesty but refused, saying he did not wish to be paid for being honest. Broadwood in cleaning out the rest room found the money and tucked it way in his coat pocket, knowing that the owner would show up later. Diogenese may now go to sleep for the honest man has been discovered.
